The Queen of our lives

Ms Rachana Kulkarni

Deep below the dark ocean,
Where rays of the sun never reached
I lay there waiting for warmth, waiting for light
I jumped, I wandered when I saw one,
Sometimes she was the queen of clouds,
Just a delicate glance and gone was she.
Sometimes came the king of Sky,
Bright and happy he seemed
For he received all the warmth, the life he wanted.
So loud and wide he swarm the ocean and was gone.
Then came the queen of Earth,
So full of life was she,
That I did think why need the warmth and light?
When this energy emanator was around,
driving you to the zenith of well being
So full was I that I could even win the kingdom of sky.
But this queen of Earth did have cracks,
Which she kept on healing,
And from far away I understood that not this energy,
But this healing made her truly powerful
Secretly did I bow to her
Slowly she was away and was gone.
World seem lost again now.
And now whom I withstand is the queen of Ocean.
Her eyes calm like ocean, her hair random like the waves.
It seemed just like the sea whose shores couldn't be bound,
So was her presence
Slowly she came to me,
Her eyes dug deep into mine

Slowly I see the warmth and light, the energy filling my life.
The queen stood beside me happy and satisfied.
For she felt I was a gem discovered
And surprisingly I felt I was.
Never did I feel I would also shine
Not as bright as sun,
Not as beautiful as moon,
Not as glittery as stars.
But by the light I held inside me,
For she had become more than the sun, moon and star
She was the Queen who swarmed happiness into my life. My mom.
